

PETA Factsheet

Carson & Barnes Circus

USDA License #73-C-0001, Box J, Hugo, OK 74743

Carson & Barnes Circus has failed to meet minimal federal standards for the care of animals used in exhibition as established in the Animal Welfare Act (AWA). The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has cited Carson & Barnes Circus numerous times for failure to provide veterinary care and minimum space, for failure to provide shelter from the elements, for failure to maintain transport trailers, for inadequate ventilation, for unsound fencing that failed to protect spectators and animals, for rusty animal cages, for giving animals unclean water, and for failure to keep animal care records. The Carson & Barnes Circus animal care director was videotaped viciously attacking elephants with a bullhook, shocking elephants with an electric prod, and instructing trainers to embed sharp, metal hooks into the elephants' flesh until the elephants scream in pain. Contact PETA for documentation.

April 27, 2010: An elephant named Viola, who had been leased from Carson & Barnes to perform with Cole Bros., escaped in Lynchburg, Virginia. She bolted from handlers and ran directly past a line of people waiting to buy tickets, sending some running toward the parking lot. Viola injured her shoulder and broke a toenail when she slid in the mud and fell into a steep ravine. She was on the loose for approximately 30 minutes before being recaptured. The circus claimed that the elephant had been spooked by a rabbit.

February 2, 2009: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to keep the housing facility in compliance.

August 30, 2007: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to correct a previously identified violation of failing to have valid tuberculosis test results for elephants. The inspector wrote, "On both 'Bunny' and 'Minnie,' two of the three trunk wash samples ... were found to be contaminated. Because of the contamination, proper testing could not be performed." Carson & Barnes was also cited for failure to handle animals in a manner that ensures minimal risk of harm to the animals and the public. The elephants were left unattended, and there was a gap in the safety barrier. The inspector wrote, "[I]t would have been very possible for a member of the public to enter the area and endanger both him- or herself and/or the animals."

July 12, 2007: Three elephants, Minnie, Susie, and Bunny, who were being leased from Carson & Barnes Circus and were performing with the Garden Bros. Circus, escaped their enclosure in Newmarket, Canada. According to news reports, Susie and Bunny roamed through downtown Newmarket, and Bunny was eventually found in a residential neighborhood.

June 6, 2007: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate veterinary care to three elephants. Becky had two cracked nails on each hind foot and a cracked nail on a front foot. Traci's nails were unevenly trimmed, causing her to bear her weight unevenly. Lisa had a cracked nail on two feet. All the elephants had rough cuticles, and a 1½-inch piece of fence wire was found in the hind foot of one of the elephants. The elephants had not had foot care since February 2007.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals

501 Front St., Norfolk, VA 23510 • 757-622-7382 • PETA.org • Circuses.com

PETA Factsheet

June 5, 2007: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to have valid tuberculosis test results for three elephants. The inspector wrote, "Two of the three culture samples required for Isla and Opal were contaminated and one of the three cultures for each elephant was negative. All three required culture samples for Isa were contaminated. These are not adequate to diagnose potential disease in these animals."

October 2, 2006: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to properly construct and maintain enclosures to safely contain animals. A portable enclosure for three small dogs had large spaces between the bars and was of insufficient height to adequately contain the dogs. One dog escaped during the inspection.

June 16, 2006: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate veterinary care to elephants named Beckie and Tracie, who had multiple cracked nails on their hind feet. Neither elephant had had foot care since March 2006. According to The Elephant's Foot, foot-related conditions and arthritis are the leading causes of euthanasia in captive elephants in the U.S. Cracked nails can lead to foot disorders that may result in serious disability or death.

July 18, 2005: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to have its program of veterinary care available for inspection and failure to provide proof of employee tuberculosis testing. The USDA requires that handlers who have direct contact with elephants be tested for tuberculosis at least annually to prevent the spread of the disease among captive elephants.

June 21, 2005: A U.S. District Court judge who viewed videotape of Carson & Barnes' animal care director Tim Frisco beating elephants with bullhooks and shocking them with electric prods described it as "troubling" and noted that it depicts conduct that violates the federal Animal Welfare Act.

May 26, 2005: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate shelter for elephants.

August 2004: The USDA issued Carson & Barnes a $550 stipulation for an accident that occurred while transporting elephants.

May 28, 2004: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failing to provide an adequate safety barrier between the public and elephants.

April 12, 2004: While in the care of Carson & Barnes, a 5-year-old endangered Asian elephant named Jennie died after contracting an elephant herpes virus carried by African elephants. Despite the American Zoo and Aquarium Association's recommendations that Asian and African elephants should not be caged together because of disease risks from this deadly virus, Carson & Barnes commingles the two species.

June 27, 2003: Two Asian elephants with Carson & Barnes were injured when a truck overturned near Minot, North Dakota. The Max Fire Department extricated the elephants from the trailer. A patrol investigator described the truck as a total loss.

March 11, 2003: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain the structural strength of its transport trailers.

February 5, 2003: The USDA noted that elephants Becky and Susie had cracked toenails. According to The Elephant's Foot, foot-related conditions and arthritis are the leading causes of euthanasia in captive elephants in the U.S. Cracked nails can lead to foot disorders that may result in serious disability or death.

January 24, 2003: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to comply with veterinary care requirements.

September 30, 2002: The USDA issued Carson & Barnes a $400 stipulation for improper handling of animals.

August 9, 2002: A Carson & Barnes truck carrying two African elephants, Paula and Kristi, crashed in Rhinebeck, New York. The driver veered onto the right shoulder, which had a 4-foot drop-off, and the truck tipped onto its side. The road was closed for five hours while emergency workers used power tools to cut into the trailer, free the trapped elephants, and remove the wreckage. The elephants suffered minor injuries. The driver was charged with having an uninspected trailer and an insufficient logbook as well as failure to keep right.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals

501 Front St., Norfolk, VA 23510 • 757-622-7382 • PETA.org • Circuses.com

PETA Factsheet

June 5, 2002: The USDA again cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate veterinary care to an African elephant named Paula with skin problems.

May 14, 2002: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate veterinary care to an African elephant named Paula with skin problems.

May 2, 2002: According to the Tulsa World, the USDA had an open investigation against Carson & Barnes as a result of a PETA undercover videotape that showed elephants being abused during training sessions (see January 9, 2002). Tim Frisco, the trainer depicted in the video, still works for the circus.

January 10, 2002: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to have adequate perimeter fencing. The inspector also noted that Paula, an African elephant, still had very rough skin that was not improving.

January 9, 2002: PETA supplied federal authorities with video footage of Carson & Barnes' animal care director, Tim Frisco, in which Frisco can be seen to viciously attack, yell at, curse, and shock endangered Asian elephants. The elephants emit agonizing screams while recoiling from the assaults. Frisco instructs other elephant trainers to hurt the elephants until they scream and run away, to forcefully strike the elephants with sharp metal bullhooks, and to sink bullhooks into the elephants' flesh and twist them until the animals scream in pain. The footage also shows a handler using a blowtorch on an elephant's skin in order to remove hair, and it shows chained elephants and caged bears who exhibit extreme degrees of stereotypic behavior caused by mental distress.

May 22, 2001: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide veterinary care to a zebu with overgrown hooves; failure to have 15 elephants under the direct control and supervision of a knowledgeable handler while children, parents, and teachers were present; overworking a camel used for rides; allowing a dog to run loose in the parking lot; failure to provide shelter to a pygmy hippopotamus, a zebu, a water buffalo, llamas, goats, and camels during gusty and rainy weather conditions; failure to provide minimum space to elephants stored in transport trailers and other elephants chained by two legs; failure to provide minimum space to big cats stored in travel cages; and improper food storage.

March 14, 2001: According to a Carson & Barnes animal inventory, a baby elephant named Jennie was on the road performing with the circus without her mother, Isa. The May/June 2000 edition of The White Tops reported that Jennie was first put on the road at 16 months of age. Elephant expert and veterinarian S.J.R. Adams, MRCVS, states that baby elephants should be kept with their mothers for at least eight to 10 years. Prematurely removing young calves from their mothers can cause depression, weaken the immune system, and lead to life-threatening infectious diseases.

January 30, 2001: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain the structural strength of its transport trailers.

September 27, 2000: According to its Web site, the Butler County Health Department in Missouri cited Carson & Barnes for two health code violations.

September 2000: According to the September/October 2000 edition of The White Tops, Carson & Barnes leased a single elephant to Roberts Bros. Circus and a single elephant to Circus Vargas. Both elephants were kept in solitary confinement. The American Zoo and Aquarium Association's Guide to Accreditation of Zoological Parks and Aquariums states, "It is inappropriate to keep highly social female elephants singly."

August 24, 2000: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to have elephant attendants, handlers, and grooms tested for tuberculosis.

July 22, 2000: According to The Capital, Carson & Barnes was forced to cancel two shows after Anne Arundel County, Maryland, fire officials deemed its tent unsafe. The circus tent failed the inspectors' flame-spread test for fire safety and lacked a permit. Inspectors also found problems with exit lightings and signs.

June 6, 2000: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for mishandling an elephant who was shackled with a leg chain without a protective covering.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals

501 Front St., Norfolk, VA 23510 • 757-622-7382 • PETA.org • Circuses.com

PETA Factsheet

October 13, 1999: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to store food and bedding in a manner that prevents contamination and for failure to provide bear cages that meet minimum space requirements.

June 16, 1998: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain transport enclosures for tigers.

February 5, 1998: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain structurally sound fencing around exotic hoofed animals, failure to provide adequate drainage in a muddy water buffalo enclosure, failure to maintain the elephant transport trailers, and failure to provide adequate outdoor housing for the dogs used in circus acts.

October 28, 1997: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to correct a previously identified violation of failure to provide adequate ventilation in the elephant transport trailer. Carson & Barnes was also cited for failure to maintain transport trailers for tigers, a pygmy hippopotamus, llamas, goats, sheep, and other animals; failure to maintain records of acquisition for the elephants; and improper food storage.

July 1997: After an inspection of the circus in Colorado, Marin Humane Society humane investigator Cindy Machado stated, "This is the worst case of neglect I have seen in my 12 years as an investigator. I watched animals become injured with blood dripping down their legs without being treated. There were ponies and horses with open, draining saddle sores that were still being ridden." Officer Machado also described snakes in extremely crowded cages, elephants with boils the size of soccer balls, and a hippopotamus without access to water.

May 28, 1997: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate ventilation in the elephant transport trailers.

March 31, 1997: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to make necessary repairs to a tiger transport trailer. The inspector wrote, "One board on exit ramp for tiger trailer is becoming splintered and needs to be replaced to prevent injury to animals' feet." The circus was also cited for failure to provide minimum space and an exercise plan for two dogs used in the show.

January 4, 1997: According to an internal USDA document, an elephant named Libby, who is owned by Carson & Barnes Circus, was exposed to Hawthorn Corporation elephants who died of tuberculosis and others who tested positive for tuberculosis.

October 15, 1996: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide veterinary treatment to more than half the elephants who needed foot care.

April 17, 1996: Carson & Barnes received a letter from the USDA warning it to correct alleged violations of the federal AWA that had appeared on two consecutive inspection reports. The circus had failed to provide an adequate barrier for the elephants.

April 11, 1996: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain the elephant transport trailer.

March 4, 1996: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to correct a previously identified violation of failure to repair a barrier fence in the area where elephants are chained and fed. The USDA also cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain rusty cages used for lions and camels, failure to maintain fencing, and failure to maintain the elephant transport trailer.

December 7, 1995: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain rusty cages used for tigers and lions, failure to maintain the zebra-donkey building, and failure to maintain a barrier fence around the area where elephants are fed.

September 28, 1995: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to correct a previously identified violation of not making necessary repairs to a tiger cage.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals

501 Front St., Norfolk, VA 23510 • 757-622-7382 • PETA.org • Circuses.com

PETA Factsheet

August 16, 1995: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide veterinary care to an elephant with an excessive buildup of dead skin as well as two pot-bellied pigs with overgrown hooves, failure to dispose of expired medication, failure to provide shelter from the elements, failure to maintain a tiger cage, failure to clean water receptacles with an excessive buildup of algae for the giraffe and zebra, poor housekeeping, and failure to maintain records of acquisition.

May 8, 1995: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to update veterinary care records, failure to provide minimum space and adequate exercise to an African elephant, failure to clean the stall for the pygmy hippopotamus, failure to have adequate ventilation in the elephant transport trailers, failure to provide big cats with sanitary drinking receptacles, and improper food storage.

May 3, 1995: According to an affidavit given to a USDA investigator, a woman attending the circus with her daughter and a friend observed an employee of Carson & Barnes Circus kick an elephant in the face and stab two elephants with a knife as the elephants tried to reach for hay, causing one elephant to scream and squeal.

February 23, 1995: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain cages and transport trailers.

February 1, 1995: A tiger in the care of Carson & Barnes escaped and was missing for 10 days, evoking panic in Hugo, Oklahoma.

October 26, 1994: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide adequate security to protect an elephant and ensure public safety.

October 21, 1994: According to news reports, an elephant named Kay “keeled over” and died while the circus was performing in Taylorville, Illinois. Kay had refused to eat or drink for several days. The 58-year-old elephant had not been retired even though she had a history of health problems and kidney infections.

August 17, 1994: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for an inadequate program of veterinary care.

June 24, 1994: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to have an adequate veterinary care program; failure to have a safety barrier between the public and large animals including elephants, giraffes, and camels; failure to maintain a rusty elephant transport trailer with sharp, jagged edges; and improper food storage.

June 23, 1994: According to the Kearney Hub, two reporters observed that Carson & Barnes animal handlers kicked and cursed at a pygmy hippopotamus and struck an elephant across the left eye with a bullhook, a giraffe repeatedly jumped from one end of a cage to the other, and a zebra continually bobbed his head and paced from side to side.

March 9, 1993: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to maintain the elephant barn, for inadequate drainage in the giraffe pen, and for a filthy zebra pen.

October 7, 1992: The USDA cited Carson & Barnes for failure to provide shelter from the elements; failure to provide minimum space to a pygmy hippopotamus, liger, and tiger who were housed together in enclosures that were so narrow that the animals were unable to turn around freely; inadequate pest control for the pygmy hippopotamus, who was plagued by swarms of flies; and failure to record veterinary treatment for a wounded rhinoceros.

April 26, 1991: According to USDA telephone conversation records, one giraffe in the care of Carson & Barnes died of hypothermia and shock in 1989, and a second giraffe died in 1990 of a possible neck injury during transport when the vehicle swerved to avoid an accident.

May 1982: Five elephants tried to escape from the circus in Sallisaw, Oklahoma. One elephant was killed during this incident.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals

501 Front St., Norfolk, VA 23510 • 757-622-7382 • PETA.org • Circuses.com